

DEPARTMENT OF THE ARMY
HEADQUARTERS, 101ST AIRBORNE DIVISION (AIR ASSAULT) AND FORT CAMPBELL
FORT CAMPBELL, KENTUCKY 42223

September 14, 2004

REPLY TO ATTENTION OF

Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Anthony A. Tarr
Dean and Professor of Law
Indiana University School of Law – Indianapolis
Lawrence W. Inlow Hall, Room 227H
530 W. New York Street
Indianapolis, IN 46202-3225

Dear Dean Tarr:

I am writing to let you know about some outstanding work on the part of one of your faculty members. Last week, Dr. William C. Bradford came to Fort Campbell and gave a presentation to the judge advocates and civilian attorneys of the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate as part of our Officer Professional Development program.

To say that Dr. Bradford's presentation was interesting and informative would be a great understatement. Undoubtedly, he is on the very cutting edge of international law, the laws of war, and international human rights law. We expected an informative, well-researched presentation, and he greatly surpassed our expectations.

I especially enjoyed discussing with him current issues in international law and appreciated his insights into the Laws of War and their application to the Global War on Terrorism and our Army's activities in the Middle East. With vast experience as a soldier in the field and subsequent training in international relations and law, Dr. Bradford is in a unique position to share valuable and specialized knowledge on the Laws of War.

By volunteering his time and energy to better educate the attorneys of the 101st Airborne Division (Air Assault) on these issues, Dr. Bradford has done a great service to the U.S. Army. Thank you for allowing him to come. I only hope we can arrange for him to make a return visit in the near future.

Sincerely,

Richard M. Whitaker
Colonel, US Army
Staff Judge Advocate